Live streaming comes to the City of Pembroke

As of Jan. 21, City of Pembroke committee and council meetings will be live streamed, allowing people to watch the meetings from anywhere they have Internet access.

Over the past month, Pembroke Council Chambers has been upgraded with camera and microphone equipment to allow for online broadcasting of committee and council meetings through the City's YouTube channel.

When people tune in, they can expect an experience very similar to being at the meetings in person. Three cameras capture all angles of the meetings, and everything will stream in real time as it is happening. The broadcast will continue to be available on YourTV as well.

People can access the live stream on a desktop computer or mobile device through the City's website \(www.pembroke.ca\) and by clicking the green "Live Stream" button at the top of the page.

"We look forward to introducing these upgrades at our meetings," says Mayor Mike LeMay. "This will allow for more of our residents and ratepayers to easily access information about what is happening in the City."
