Council thanks all health-care workers for efforts during COVID-19 pandemic

Mayor Mike LeMay and Council extend their sincerest thanks to all health-care workers for their efforts to support our community and keep people safe and cared for during the COVID-19 pandemic.

May 11-17 marks National Nursing Week and is the perfect time to recognize the efforts of local nurses, as well as all health-care workers such as personal support workers, doctors, support staff, administration staff and IT staff.

“Every day, these workers are giving their all at our hospitals, our retirement and long-term care homes, and in people’s homes,” says Mayor Mike LeMay. “We commend them for taking care of our community’s physical and mental health during these trying times.”

LeMay adds this work is especially important for Pembroke’s seniors and vulnerable residents. “Some people really need extra care at this time,” he says. “We would not be able to provide that care without the work and dedication of our health-care teams and professionals.”
